Learn Before You Burn

If it doesn't grow, don't burn it!

Know the Facts. Know the Laws.
Know the Risks.

OPEN BURNING

Open Burning is the burning of any material in an open fire or an outdoor container.

Smoke from open burning pollutes the air and can cause health problems for children and adults. These problems can be worse for people with reduced lung function such as Asthma.

Burning trash is illegal in South Carolina. Trash may contain toxic chemicals, and those chemicals are released into the air when they are burned in an open fire.

Small sticks, leaves, grass clippings, and kitchen vegetable waste make great mulch and compost for your garden. Larger stumps and limbs may be collected and used by your county government to produce mulch. Most counties offer mulch either free of charge or for a small cost.

State law requires that you notify the S.C. Forestry Commission before you burn certain vegetative materials.

- If you plan to burn residential yard debris within city limits, contact your local government for local burn ordinances.
- If you plan to burn residential yard debris outside city or town limits, you should call a toll-free number for the county in which you live. A list of these numbers can be found on the internet at: www.state.sc.us/forest/fyard.htm
- If located next to woods, brush or grassland call the Forestry Commission at: (800) 777-3473 before burning vegetative materials from land clearing or right of way maintenance.
For more information: www.state.sc.us/forest/fireburn.htm

Remember, even though you may have notified the Forestry Commission, you must still follow DHEC's regulations for open burning.

If you need to report open burning in your neighborhood, please call your Regional DHEC EQC office (Refer to list on the back of this brochure for local DHEC Regional Offices).
